Like the ground turning green in a spring wind.
Like birdsong beginning inside the egg.

Like this universe coming into existence,
The lover wakes, and whirs,
In a dancing joy.

Then kneels down
In praise.

Rumi, “Birdsong From Inside The Egg”

Program Description:

Natalie Goldberg says that love is “the one word no writer should ever utter,” yet stories of star crossed lovers, unrequited love, spiritual love, and love of friends and family are a compelling force in literature, myth, history, and culture. This intensive program will survey different representations of love: from the passion of Eros and Psyche to Heloise and Abelard, from Sappho to Shakespeare, and from Blake to the Beatles. As we explore various aspects of love, from the romantic to the mystical, we will read selections from Plato, Rumi, the Arthurian Romances, the medieval mystical and courtly love traditions, John Donne, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Keats, Rilke, D.H. Lawrence, Neruda, Tagore, Bly, and others. We will also explore firsthand accounts of how different cultures sanction or restrain this powerful emotion.

Throughout the course we will review a variety of sources, both contemporary and traditional, as we engage in critical reflection and analysis of texts, films, and performances, and develop tools of literary criticism, historical analysis, and cultural studies. Sources will include ballads and songs, medieval literature, mythology, poetry, plays, films, and novels. Students will experience a rigorous program of reading, writing, artistic expression, oral presentation, and critical discussion. Writing and research assignments are designed for the committed student who wants to work deeply and to write well. Instructional strategies include lectures, workshops, films, performances, and seminars.

Contact is hard, but how do we create intimacy in our world? That is the currency of the heart. It’s all we have when we’re at our “crossing.” In the end, what mattered, what was really important was, Did I Love Well? Did I love people, earth, clouds, trees, life, language, myself?

Jack Kornfield, on meditation practice
Goals:

1) To experience the challenges of reading, understanding, talking, and writing about oral, textual, and cinematic representations of love.
2) To identify themes, motifs, rituals, symbols, and icons associated with different images of the love.
3) To explore the shifting role of love in different genders, cultures, and time-periods.
4) To complicate your understanding of the concept of love.
5) To identify and appreciate various aspects of love in everyday life.
6) To expand your understanding and practice of editing, revision, and various writing techniques.
7) To research, explore, write and present some aspect around the themes of love that intrigue you.
8) To learn basic skills and concepts of oral presentation and storytelling.
9) To explore different theoretical traditions that shape our thinking about the love including: psychology, comparative mythology, literature, cultural studies, and communications theory.
10) To transfer the abilities and skills learned in this program to one’s academic, professional, and personal life.

Course Equivalencies: Students can receive a total of eight quarter hours credit for college level work in the following areas: world literature, writing, comparative mythology or psychology.

Expectations
- Faithfully attends and fully participates at meetings, workshops, films, and seminars.
- Reads and responds to the texts faithfully;
- Maintains a portfolio of class handouts, class notes (on lectures, workshops and films), papers, research, and cumulative work for the quarter. These will be reviewed at fifth week and final evaluation conferences.
- Successfully completes all individual or group projects, presentations, workshops, or assignments on time.

Assignments
- Response papers turned in promptly at each seminar (1-2 pages, typed). These papers will allow you to: 1) comment upon the readings and films, and 2) summarize, reflect upon, and integrate program topics, themes, and issues. (See Guidelines to reading responses.)
- A final draft, edited and revised during in-class writing workshops of: 1) either a personal essay (3-5 pages), or 2) 3-5 poems.
- One typed, double-spaced research or reflective paper (5-7 pages). This paper may involve doing research on a particular work on love: the Beatles song “Yesterday;” a medieval mystic such as Hildegard of Bingen on “love of God;” a novel such as Emily Bronte’s Wuthering Heights; The Beat poets on love; Love Ballads, etc. You may also want to do a comparative study of a theme on love. For example: What is Agape? How is love represented in a particular culture? What is the psychology of falling in love? What are some of the contemporary social issues about love? How is the ideal of love represented in film, myth, or literature?. You may explore other topics. You will give a presentation on your research at the end of the quarter. See handout for more detail.
- Oral presentation of a story, poem, ballad, or song that relates to the program topic. (See handout for details.)
- A group presentation on Shakespeare’s “As You Like It,” or other dramatic work from the class. (See handout for details.)
- Maintain a writing journal that includes writing workshop notes, as well as other writing ideas you develop throughout the quarter. Each item in this journal must be dated.

"Love inspires even a mediocre person toward excellence, so that he is similar to the best in nature," according to one ancient Greek Philosopher. The playwright Sophocles warned of Love "unconquered in battle," Love sleeps on maidens' cheeks roams in savage places, whom neither man nor immortals can flee, who introduces madness and forcibly turns the minds of just men to injustice and their own disgrace. The ancient philosopher Empedocles thought that Love and Strife were the forces that moved the universe. Freud talked of Eros and Thanatos, Love and Death, as the basic human instincts.
Nowadays love is more talked about on the psychiatrist's couch than in the philosopher's seminar, but still it's an essential human question. What's love got to do with it?

Christopher Lyden, “The Connection”

Required Readings: We will read selections from the following texts.

- Assorted essays, stories, and songs including: The Beatles, Joseph Campbell, Raymond Carver, folktales, etc. (These will be given as handouts in class, or they will be put on reserve in the library.

Disclaimer: The following schedule is a general guide and is subject to revision.

READING ASSIGNMENTS:
Week One:

Due: Thursday, April 5, 2001

Focus your reading response on ideas and themes that you find in Rilke. However, see how many connections you can make to Campbell’s and Moyer’s video, “Love and The Goddess,” and the text, “Tales Of Love and Marriage. Follow the format outlined in the “Guide to Reading Responses” handout.
Week Two:

-Sappho, Translated by Mary Barnard. Read all.
-The Erotic Spirit, Sam Hamill. pp. 1-42.

On Reserve in the Library: (5 copies available)
Journeys in Sexuality and Gender. Supplementary readings of short stories and essays that included multiple psychological, sociological perspectives on love. Authors included: Raymond Carver, Walt Whitman, Bullfinch, Updike, Freud, Jung, Maxine Hong Kingston, Hemmingway, Divakaruni, and others. Selections cover everything from the inner world of a Muslim woman, to virtual sex, the female icon, on being a boy, and cross-dressing. They explore gender issues in different cultures, historical periods, age groups, and social classes. As you read, begin to look at examples of dialogue, description, and other details.

Find at least five poems about love that you would like to focus on in seminar.

As you read, what is the focus of the Greek texts? What are they trying to consider about love?

For extra credit, how does that compare to some of the other cultures and perspectives that you find in the essays in the library.

Week 3:

Arthurian Romances: Chretien De Troyes.
“The Knight Of The Cart, Lancelot) (p.207-294)
For extra credit, read the “Knight with the Lion.”

As you read, think about the different kinds of relationships, loyalties, loves, and codes of honor between men and women. What connections can you make to Joseph Campbell’s discussion on courtly love and the Arthurian tradition?

Birdsong From Inside The Egg
Sometimes a lover of God may faint
In the presence. Then the beloved bends
And whispers in his ear, “Beggar, spread out
Your robe. I’ll fill it with gold.

I’ve come to protect your consciousness.
Where has it gone? Come back into awareness.”

This fainting is because
Lovers want so much.

A chicken invites a camel into her henhouse,
And the whole structure is demolished.

A rabbit nestles down
With its eyes closed
In the arms of a lion.

There is an excess
In spiritual searching
That is profound ignorance.
Let that ignorance be our teacher!
The Friend breathes into one
Who has no breath.

A deep silence revives the listening
And the speaking of those two who meet on the riverbank.

Like the ground turning green in a spring wind.
Like birdsong beginning inside the egg.

Like this universe coming into existence,
The lover wakes, and whirls,
In a dancing joy.

Then kneels down
In praise.
